

I am a senior citizen and we need a break on our income taxes. As a senior, I have a private pension (I am lucky to have one). It is not a big one like the state employees and federal employees earn but I am glad I have it. I feel there should be a limit to the tax on these pensions. I think what would be fair to tax only pensions over $100k. You don't get many breaks in this state as a senior, unlike many southern states where I would love to move to but my wife will not agree, at least not yet, our grandkids are reason for staying put for now. I don't get a break on property taxes either and I don't have any kids in school either. The town won't budge in that issue. I remember in the 1960's my dad had his property taxes frozen when he turned 65. I think this is fair, at least your property taxes won't go up every year like they do now. The towns will not budge on this issue because anything that reduces revenue, they do not want to hear about. It would have to come from the state.
